

Analysis of McCausland Genealogical Histories as contained in
Burke's Landed Gentry of Ireland

There are various editions of Burke's Landed Gentry of Ireland which include genealogies of McCauslands and related families. Not all of these genealogies are consistent. In some cases later genealogies include further information to bring the genealogies "up-to-date". In other cases they include older histories which were apparently not known to the previous researchers. Still, in other cases, information is changed - not always correctly!

It should be noted that many professional genealogists do not consider the Burke's information to be very reliable, for various reasons. First, these genealogies are sponsored by descendants who wish to go on record as descended from prominent families. In an effort to show this, they sometimes took liberties with the truth. Secondly, Burke's contains few source references, so it is virtually impossible to verify all that is published as the truth. Thirdly, the persons providing the information are not generally professional genealogists, so innocent incorrect inferences or connections may be made.

Given the possible unreliable nature of Burke's, the genealogies do provide a good starting point for research as a means for verification of the truth and filling in the blanks. So far as the McCauslands are concerned, Burke's relates nearly exclusively to the Limavady, Co. Derry branch descended from Col. Robert McCausland. As the information was provided by direct descendants, the more recent information (ca. 1800, onwards) is probably fairly reliable. Nevertheless, I have found errors relating to information provided for Lt. Gen John Kennedy McCausland and have noted them. It is quite possible that other errors also exist, particularly for branches not closely related to those providing the information to Burke's.

It is unfortunate that other McCausland genealogies present information taken from Burke's as fact without attributing the source or providing a caution. When this is done through a series of genealogies, suppositions finally are presented as hard facts. I must admit that I have used the Burke's genealogies as a primary basis for my own research and published gedcom, but would hope that eventually all "facts" presented could be further established through other sources.

To this time, I have collected the McCausland and related genealogies from the 1899, 1958, and 1979 editions of Burke's. 'Someday' I will restructure these to make them clearer to read by incorporating the principal line into the proper places (rather than using the Burke's "of whom presently" form), making reference numbers more consistent, and reformatting to make the whole easier to follow. None of the genealogical data has been changed, even when it is known to be incorrect. When it is incorrect, I have added a note explaining why. I have also added a "<" after the name of individuals having no descendants.

McCausland genealogy as described in Burke's Irish Family Records, 1979 Pages 746-748:

I have restructured the material to present the genealogies in their proper order, rather than following the "of whom presently" order as given in Burke's. The text has not been changed even when known errors exist. However, I have added notes in cases in which Burke's appears to be in error (red) or to add additional commentary (yellow). A "<" has been added after those persons for whom there is no further line of descent. Those persons still living in 1979 are preceded by a "•".

Lineage-BARON McCAUSLANE, of Scotland, had issue,

1 Andrew, of whom presently.

2 John, trans to Ireland with his brother ca 1620, as part of Plantation of Ulster under King James I.

The elder son,

Andrew McCAUSLAND, m and had issue,

Alexander McCAUSLAND, of Resh and Ardstraw, Co Tyrone, "a prudent and active gentleman" fought in Civil Wars, m and had with other issue,

1 Oliver, of Resh, Co Tyrone, High Sheriff 1698, "one of the most sufficient gentlemen in these parts of the Kingdom", m and had with other issue,

Oliver, of Strabane, Co Tyrone, MP.

2 Andrew, The yr son, Andrew McCAUSLAND, of Ardecheyl, m _____ (possibly of the family of CONOLLY of Castletown-see 1912 Edn), and had issue,

Col Robert McCAUSLAND, of Fruit Hill nr Newtown-limavady, Co Derry, styled "his cousin" in will of Capt Oliver McCausland, of Strabane, of which he was left exor and also a legatee, had estates in parish of Cappagh, Co Tyrone, and s under will of Rt Hon William Conolly, of Castletown, Co Kildare, to considerable ppty in Co Derry, m July 1709, Hannah, widow of James Hamilton, JP, of Strabane, and granddau of William Moore, of Garvey, and dca 1734, leaving surv issue,

[At this p  the genealogy separates to three primary descendant male branches of Col. Robert McCausland - Conolly, Marcus and Frederick. The daughters, Sarah, Rebecca and Hannah are presented without further genealogy. These three male descendants of Col. Robert McCausland are associated with three distinct locations in the Limavady region: Conolly with Fruit Hill, Marcus with Daisy Hill, and Frederick with Streeve Hill. As Col. Robert McCausland was "of Fruit Hill", his eldest son, Conolly, apparently inherited this property. Fruit Hill was changed to the current Drenagh in the late 1800's and descendants still live there today. Conolly McCausland built a house at Streeve Hill in 1730 which still stands today as a hotel/B&B. There is some indication that Col. Robert McCausland had other sons not mentioned in this genealogy, as there appear to be many other lines that tradition says are descended from him.

This genealogy was prepared through the efforts of a descendant of Conolly McCausland who was still residing in Drenagh in 1979. As a member of the Ulster Defense Regiment, he was tragically killed by the IRA. His family continues to reside in Drenagh.]

The Surnames of Scotland:

MACAUSLAN, Macausland, Macauselan, Macauslane, Macauslin, Maccaslane, Maccausland, Macaslan, Macasland, Maccasland, Macaslin, Maccasline, 'son of Absalon'. The first name recorded appears to be Absalon, son of Macbed (or Macbethe), a churchman, to whom a charter of the island called Clarines (Clarinch in Loch Lomond, later the gathering place of Clan Buchanan) was granted by Maldoun or Maldouen, third earl of Lennox, in 1225 (Lennox, II, p. 4). Between 1208-14 as Absalon or Absalone, 'clericus meus', he witnessed the gift by Alewin, second earl of Lennox of the church of Kamsi (Campsie) to God and S. Kentigern, and also witnessed the gift of the church of Cadinros or Cardinros (now Cardross) by Maldouen, son and heir of Alwin, to the same (REG., p. 87, 88, 93). As dominus Absalone de Buchkanan he witnessed Earl Maldouen's charter to Sir Robert Herthford, precentor of Glasgow, before 1224 (RMP., p. 217). Absalone, 'senescallus meus' or 'clericus meus', probably son of Absalon son of Macbed, appears several times as a charter witness between 1238 and c. 1240 (Levenax, p. 13, 91, 96, 98). Absalone, son of Absalone, probably the third of the name, along with his brothers Gilbert and Mathew, appear as witnesses between 1273 and 1315 (ibid., p. 15, 16, 20, 85, 99), and Gilbert filius Absalon served on an inquisition in Dumbartonshire, 1271 (RMP., p. 191). Malcolm Macabsalon witnessed a confirmation charter by Robert I to Sir John Colquhoun, 1308 (Lennox, II, p. 407), and "Anslan Macgilespie de Lany" (c. 1330) is mentioned in an old genealogical tree of the Lanys of that Ilk compiled probably before 1540 (Strathendrick, p. 292) It may have been a Macauslan who killed the duke of Clarence, brother of Henry V of England, at the battle of Beaugé in 1421, as the duke's circle of gold was brought into camp by Alexander Macausland (Book of Pluscardyn). Patrick McCaslane of Caldanacht and Donald McCaslane his brother were followers of the earl of Argyll in 1536 (RSS., II, 2152), and the death of Katherine N'Chastyllan at Slattyck in Glenlyon is recorded in 1542 (Chr. Fort., p. 121). John McAslan in Auchingech and Patrik More McCaslen in Auchingyle, were fined for aiding outlawed Clan Gregor, 1613 (RPC., XIV, p. 644). The McCauslands of Drenagh, county Londonderry, are descended from the Macauslans of Dumbartonshire. Makaslane 1478.
